IMPORTANT UPDATE Johnson & Johnson Talcum Powder

Following years of delay due to Johnson & Johnson's fraudulent bankruptcies, Goldstein Greco forges ahead for your justice.

Latest Developments:

Johnson & Johnson changed the name of its shell subsidiary from LTL to LLT and moved to Texas (more favorable bankruptcy laws than North Carolina). J & J has also pursued smear campaigns and claims against respected scientists who published peer reviewed studies critical of Johnson & Johnson's claims.

The federal multi-district court is considering multiple motions in over 50,000 cases with some being assigned trial dates. Additionally, J & J faces an investor lawsuit for false claims while settling with the Attorneys General of 42 states for making false statements about the safety of its talcum powder.

Juries have found J & J knew its talcum powder was contaminated with asbestos for decades and chose to hide this fact from the public; it continues to deny wrongdoing and avoids compensating women/families devastated by its conduct.

Please review Reuters' investigation into Johnson & Johnson's conduct:

The Goldstein Greco team remains fully committed to obtaining the best result for you and your family. As always, we are here for your questions.

Very truly yours;
